

New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy: Index of Articles (2003-2022)

New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy is a peer-reviewed journal published annually (from 2003) by Music Therapy New Zealand (MThNZ). In 2018 NZJMT became an online, open access publication, with recent issues (2016 – present) available from <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal>. A print edition is provided each year for current MThNZ members.

Pre-2016 content can be accessed via library databases, print editions in some libraries, or by emailing the article author(s) or NZJMT editor: nzjmt1@musictherapy.org.nz

NZJMT succeeded the non-peer reviewed Annual Journal of the New Zealand Society for Music Therapy (1987-2002) for which a separate index is also available from the website.

Note, this citation style used in this document is APA 7th edition, adopted by NZJMT in 2020. You will come across earlier citation styles in pre-2020 issues.

- Ah Sam, O. (2019). Community Voice: Exploring Healing in Musical Identities - A Samoan Perspective. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 17, 43-46. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2019-2>
- Allan, M. (2018). Community music therapy to support the relationship between family carers and people Living with dementia: A pilot project. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 16, 31-53. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2018-2>
- Archer, C. (2004). Music therapy and early intervention: The parent-child relationship is centre stage. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 2, 36-49.
- Ayson, C. (2011). The use of music therapy to support the SCERTS model: Objectives for a three year old boy with Autism Spectrum Disorder in New Zealand. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 9, 7-31.
- Baker, F., & MacKinlay, E. (2005). Facilitating the transition into motherhood through lullaby singing: A pilot study. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 3, 7-35.
- Barrett, H. (2020). Are community music therapy principles relevant to my work with large groups of older adults in a residential care facility? Findings from a student action research project. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 18, 115-140. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2020-2>
- Barrett, H., & McKenzie, C. (2022). Kimi Choir: Developing an augmentative and alternative communication choir. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 20, 5-18. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2022-2>
- Berentson-Glass, M. (2017). Harmony through collaboration: An accessible concert project. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 15, 37-57.
- Bowden, A.R. (2015). Culturally-based impacts on a psychotherapy practice in Aotearoa. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 13, 33-50.
- Castelino, A. (2008). The benefits and clinical applications of the guitar in music therapy: A literature review. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 6, 6-26.
- Churchill, V., & McFerran, K. (2014). Developing a music therapy assessment tool specific to persons with severe to profound multiple disabilities. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 12, 8-33.
- Cooper, A., & Molyneux, C. (2009). Singing the same tune? Co-therapy to support clients experiencing a change of music therapist. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 7, 32-60.

- Coulson, J. (2006). "The most important thing is to communicate" - An interview with Mary Brooks, New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 4, 94-104.
- Coulson, J. (2004). Am I my voice? Communication, speech and music therapy. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 2, 99-122.
- Docherty, L., Nicholson, J., & Williams, K. (2007). Sing & Grow: The co-existence of evaluation research and clinical practice in an early intervention music therapy project. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 5, 5-20.
- Fletcher, H. (2014). Rāanga wairua: Creative cultural collaborations in an infant, child and adolescent mental health service. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 12, 87-105.
- Fletcher, H. (2016). Invited essay: A brief history of music therapy governance and administration in New Zealand (1974 to 2016). New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 14, 10-24.
<https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2016-2>
- Gilling, D. (2014). Music-making and the organisation: Researching the orchestra at work. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 12, 106-135.
- Gordon, J., & Hoskyns, S. (2022). Playing their song? Is it about them or me? A personal reflection on my music therapy student journey and findings. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 20, 18-46.
<https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2022-2>
- Hepburn, M., & Krout, R. (2004). Meaning, purpose, transcendence and hope: Music therapy and spirituality at end of life hospice care. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 2, 58-82.
- Hodgson, N. (2018). He oro waiora: Music therapy and well-being in adolescent mental health. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 16, 71-94. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2018-2>
- Hoskyns, S. (2005). Co-mentoring in music therapy education: Reflections on practice in the UK and opportunities for New Zealand. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 3, 36-66.
- Hoskyns, S. (2011). Collaborative conversations in focus group research: Music therapists reflect on combining research and practice. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 9, 32-60.
- Hoskyns, S. (2017). The place of improvisation in case study research in music therapy. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 15, 9-36. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2017-2>
- Jenkins, B., Storie, S., & Purdy, S. (2017). Quality of life for individuals with a neurological condition who participate in social/therapeutic choirs. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 15, 53-94.
<https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2017-2>
- Jeong, A.A.Y., & Darroch, B. (2021). Using letter boards in client-centred music therapy: "Autistics can teach if some are ready to listen". New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 19, 34-53.
<https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/2021-2>
- Johnson, E., & Rickson, D. (2018). Songwriting with adolescents who have mental health difficulties: One music therapy student's experience. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 16, 115-137. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2018-2>
- Jones, V.A. (2016). A review of the research literature for the use of music and music therapy in the setting of dementia and how this informs an approach to service delivery by Music Moves Me Trust. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 14, 162-178.
<https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2016-2>
- Krout, R. (2003). Growth, challenge and change –the continuing journey of music therapy Aotearoa through community, metaphor and song. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 1, 6-29.
- Krout, R. (2006). Following the death of a child: Music therapy helping to heal the family heart. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 4, 6-22.
- Krout, R. (2008). Assessing and using emerging adaptive electronic music technology to facilitate creative client expression in music therapy. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 6, 27-46.
- Langlois Hunt, E. (2020). Developing a sense of belonging: A case study on the use of peer inclusion to support a child with selective mutism. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 18, 141-158.
<https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2020-2>

- Lowery, O. E. L. (2018). Case study: Individual music therapy with an elderly man in a residential care setting. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 16, 95-113.
- Lowery, O.E.L., Ryckaert, J., Field, A., Butler, R., & Were, L. (2020). A sense of belonging: Evaluating how a music therapy service is valued by its community. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 18, 87-114. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2020-2>
- Matthews, R., Purdy, S. C., & Tippet, L. J. (2019). Song choice and vocal exercises in group singing for people with Parkinson's disease: The perspective of a speech-language therapist/musician. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 17, 25-41. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2019-2>
- Molyneux, C., Koo, N., Talmage, A., Piggot-Irvine, E., Travaglia, R., & Willis, M. (2012). Doing it together: Collaborative research on goal-setting and review in a music therapy centre. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 10, 6-38.
- Molyneux, C., Talmage, A., & McGann, H. (2016). A Music Therapy New Zealand report on music therapy provision in New Zealand. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 14, 25-54. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2016-2>
- Moreno, A.S. (2021). "Today we sing for a different future": Therapeutic songwriting in early stage dementia in Spain: A group case study. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 19, 16-33. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/2021-2>
- Nugent, N. (2003). Processes in group music therapy: Reducing agitation in individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related disorders. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 1, 60-81.
- O'Hagan, S., Allen, D., Bennett, M., Bridgeman, A., Lumsden, K., & Wallace, L. (2004). Transdisciplinary teamwork improves care: Five disciplines combine skills to assist people with intellectual disabilities. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 2, 50-57.
- Potter, M. (2008). Facilitating verbal interactions in a music therapy group of adolescents with developmental delays. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 6, 47-75.
- Pryor, J. (2004). Family harmonics: Who conducts the orchestra? New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 2, 6-16.
- Rickson, D. (2004). Angela's mother: The early years. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 2, 17-35.
- Rickson, D. (2006). Reflections on the nature of relationship in brief music therapy encounters with children who have developmental difficulties. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 4, 23-45.
- Rickson, D. (2008). The potential role of music in Special Education (The PROMISE): New Zealand music therapists consider collaborative consultation. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 6, 76-97.
- Rickson, D. (2009). The use of music to facilitate learning and development in a school in Thailand: An exploratory case study. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 7, 61-87.
- Rickson, D. (2010). Music therapy school consultation: A literature review. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 8, 59-91.
- Rickson, D. (2020). Music therapy with children who have autism spectrum conditions in New Zealand – An appreciative acknowledgement. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 18, 66-78. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2020-2> (Note, this article received an open review.)
- Rickson, D. (2021). Collaborating with the World Federation of Music Therapy. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 19, 101-109. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2021-2> (Note, this article received an open review.)
- Rickson, D., & Twyford, K. (2011). Music therapy consultation in a New Zealand School: Staff members' perceptions of outcomes. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 9, 61-85.
- Rickson, D., Molyneux, C., Ridley, H., Castelino, A., & Upjohn-Beatson, E. (2015). Music therapy with people who have Autism Spectrum Disorder – current practice in New Zealand. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 13, 8-32.

- Robinson, A. (2019). The long journey to language and speech recovery for a man with global aphasia and apraxia: A music therapy case study. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 17, 9-24. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2019-2>
- Rollo, T.M.P. (2013). Mā te wai ka piki ake te hauora. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 11, 51-80.
- Rollo, T.M. (2014). Waiata: Āio mauritau āio. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 12, 6-7.
- Ryckaert, J., & Kenworthy, F. (2016). Tune In: Creating confident communicators through music therapy and speech-language therapy collaboration. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 14, 104-121.
- Sabri (2021). Musicking Together: Collaborating with local musicians and music therapists. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 19, 86-100. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2021-2> (Note, this article received an open review.)
- Sato, K., & Sonoyama, S. (2017). A behavioural study exploring the use of originally composed songs to encourage children at a Japanese day treatment facility to transition between activities. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 15, 95-117.
- Savage, R., & Johnston Taylor, E. (2013). Hospice family caring behaviours during music therapy. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 11, 81-103.
- Shaw, F. (2006). Triadic improvisations: Developing communication skills. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 4, 46-63.
- Spragg, M. (2020). Music therapy professional practice experiences in two countries, New Zealand and Australia. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 18, 79-86. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2020-2> (Note, this article received an open review.)
- Stevenson, K. (2003). Music therapy assisted communication with children with severe disabilities. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 1, 82-92.
- Storie, S., & Hoskyns, S. (2016). A music therapist's speech and expressive language specific tool set. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 14, 82-103. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2016-2>
- Swamy, S. (2014). Music therapy in the global age: Three keys to successful culturally centred practice. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 12, 34-57.
- Swaney, M. (2018). Clinical Improvisation in Group Music Therapy with Adults with Severe Brain Injury: A Space Where Everything Can Happen, or Nothing Can Happen. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 16, 9-29. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2018-2>
- Talmage, A., Bernstein-Ellis, E., & Jones, B. (2022). Aphasia Choirs Go Global: Individual and collaborative journeys towards an interprofessional online community of practice. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 20, 47-89. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2022-2>
- Talmage, A., Clulee, M.B.C., Cho, H., Glass, M., Gordon, J., Hoskyns, S., Hunt, B.J., Jeong, A.A.H., Johns, L., Kong, J.C., Langlois Hunt, E., Matthews, E., Rickson, D., Riegelhaupt Landreani, C., Sabri, S., & Solly, R. (2020, in press). Music therapy in a time of pandemic: Experiences of musicking, telehealth, and resource-oriented practice during COVID-19 in Aotearoa New Zealand. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 18. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2020-2> (Note, this article received an open review.)
- Talmage, A., Ludlam, S., Leão, S., Fogg Rogers, L., & Purdy, S. (2013). Leading the CeleBRation Choir: The Choral Singing Therapy protocol and the role of the music therapist in a social singing group for adults with neurological conditions. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 11, 7-50.
- Talmage, A., & Purdy, S.C. (2021). Choirs and singing groups for adults living with neurogenic communication difficulties: Semi-structured interviews with current and potential facilitators. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 19, 54-85. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2021-2>

- Thompson, N., Storie, S., & Purdy, S. (2016). "Catching the tune or channelling the beat": A pilot study investigating the role of rhythm in therapeutic singing for aphasia. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 14, 122-161. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2016-2>
- Toomey, L. (2004). Music: My joy and my friend. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 2, 83 –98.
- Travaglia, R. & Treefoot, A. (2010). Exploring the dance and music dialogue: Collaboration between music therapy and dance movement therapy in Aotearoa/New Zealand. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 8, 34-58.
- Twyford, K. (2007). Getting it together: Understanding the importance of collaboration. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 5, 21-33.
- Twyford, K. (2009). An Education Training and Professional Practice Forum Report on the Remuneration of New Zealand Music Therapists in 2008. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 7, 88-108.
- Twyford, K. (2009). Finding a niche: establishing a role for music therapy within the Ministry of Education, Special Education NZ. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 7, 6-31.
- Twyford, K. (2012). Getting to know you: Peer and staff perceptions of involvement in inclusive music therapy groups with students with special educational needs in mainstream school settings. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 10, 39-73.
- Twyford, K. (2013). Introducing some defined Specialist Music Therapy Services within the Ministry of Education Special Education, NZ: Outcomes from a pilot project study. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 11, 104-132.
- Warren, P., & Nugent, N. (2010). The Music Connections Programme: Parents' perceptions of their children's involvement in music therapy. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 8, 8-33.
- Warren, P., & Rickson, D. (2016). What factors shape a music therapist? An investigation of music therapists' professional identity over time in New Zealand. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 14, 55-81. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2016-2>
- Webster, J. (2003). From retreat to emergence: a personal journey. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 1, 48-59.
- Webster, J., & Rickson, D. (2018). Selecting the best music for patient listening while unwell: A music therapist's personal experience. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 16, 55-69. <https://www.musictherapy.org.nz/journal/2018-2>
- Williams, K. (2003). A child with a burn injury in a paediatric hospital: A case study. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 1, 30-47.
- Williamson, K. (2006). Songwriting techniques used by New Zealand music therapists. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 4, 64-93.
- Willis, M., Watson, J., & Talmage, A. (2014). Navigating cross-cultural pathways on Rarotonga: An exploratory collaboration bringing together a music therapist, a speech-language therapist, the Cook Islands Ministry of Education and a day centre for adults with intellectual and physical disabilities. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 12, 58-87.
- Wilson, L.H. (2007). Perspectives on professionalisation: Implications for music therapy in Aotearoa New Zealand. New Zealand Journal of Music Therapy, 5, 34-41.